In the Spotlight: Fell School

Students at the Fell School in South Philly are working hard on a traffic safety service learning project!

Asking the question, "What can we do to make our community safer for people who walk, bike, take public transit, and drive?", students have surveyed their school community and are helping spread the word about traffic safety. In May, students and teachers will host a "Street Safety Week" at school to talk about traffic safety.

Keep up the good work, Fell! We can't wait to see what else the students at the Fell School will do with their projects!
